D: Morning!

M: [Were] you watching me sleep?

D: Maybe.

M: Are you some kind of weirdo who watches women sleep?

D: Maybe.

M: [laughs]

M: You're watching me sleep again?!

D: You're cute when you sleep. What can I say?

M: Yeah, but don't you sleep? Why are you always up before the alarm?

D: Oh, I'm a light sleeper. It's no big deal.

M: So, something woke you up.

D: It's no big deal. It's just that... you snore a little.

M: What?! I do not!

D: Yes, you do. I love it. I find it charming that such a big noise can come from such a little person.

M: Do you know what's not charming?

D: What?

M: Your morning breath.

D: Sorry? What?

M: I'm just saying, seeing how you're always up before me, you might consider brushing your teeth.

D: Okay, this is me brushing my teeth.

M: Thank you!

M: Oh, you have got to be kidding me! Where is George?

D: He slept the night at the hospital.

M: And you slept in his bed? All night?

D: No, just after you fell asleep.

M: So, you're telling me that my snoring is so bad... How did you deal with it for all those nights before I found out about your wife?

I: He usually sleeps on the couch, sets an alarm, gets back in bed before you wake up.

D: I didn't wanna hurt your feelings.

M: Well, I'm gonna do more than hurt your feelings.

D: What are you doing? Stop it! Look, I'll hurt your feelings this time!

M: [laughs]

D: Shut it off! Please!

M: Could you not snap at me?

D: Sorry. I didn't sleep much.

M: Maybe it's because you were too busy shoving me every five minutes.

D: I wasn't shoving you, I was nudging you to stop the very loud sawing of wood.

M: I wore the nose strip.

D: Oh, that's cute, but it doesn't work.

M: Ow!

D: What?

M: You need to shave.

D: There's a surgery, you know? It's a minor, laser thing. It's supposed to really help, we could look into it.

M: Sure. And while we're at it, let's look at halitosis cures for you. Not to mention stubble cures, because it has now become physically impossible for me to kiss your face.

D: I am too tired to shave!

And the blooper...

M: [snoring] [laughing]

D: You suck at snoring!
